CPLP Defined

CareerJournal.com estimates that 78,000 people will enter the training and development field between 2004 and 2014. With so many new practitioners, it is important to have a standardized measure that showcases expertise, quantifies experience, and proves credibility within the field.

Just as the accounting profession has the CPA (Certified Public Accountant) and the real estate profession has the CRS (Certified Residential Specialist), the workplace learning and performance (WLP) profession is able to distinguish their expert practitioners and knowledge leaders with the Certified Professional in Learning and Performance™ (CPLP™).

CPLP credential holders include WLP professionals from every corner of the business world: global corporations, small businesses, and independent consultants.

THE CPLP IS THE PREDOMINANT CREDENTIAL FOR THE TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT PROFESSION. WHEN PEOPLE THINK OF WORKPLACE LEARNING EXCELLENCE, THEY THINK CPLP.

What CPLP Will do for You

The CPLP credential enables WLP professionals to enhance their reputation, showcase their knowledge, differentiate themselves and their programs, maintain rigorous standards within the profession, and prove their capability to lead the training function.

Credentialing provides a roadmap for professional development, while increasing an individual's earning potential, and broadening their career opportunities.

CPLP WILL ENABLE YOU TO STAY COMPETITIVE, PROVE YOUR EXPERTISE, AND ADVANCE YOUR CAREER—ESPECIALLY IN A TOUGH JOB MARKET.
